Note on recommendation of bank's own financial instruments

In fund consulting basic, only PostFinance strategy funds are recommended as standard. This means that third-party funds from the investment universe are not part of PostFinance's recommendation. Conflicts of interest can arise through the use of the bank's own strategy funds with economic links. The conflict of interest is due to the fact that PostFinance is remunerated for the provision of its marketing and sales services for the bank's own strategy funds. The amount of remuneration is disclosed to customers in the information sheet on "Costs and sales remuneration in the Fund self-service and Fund consulting basic investment solutions", as well as in the respective factsheets. Customers waive their right to reimbursement by means of a contractual agreement. This provides PostFinance with an incentive to recommend its own financial instruments. The reason for recommending the bank's own strategy funds is that customers are always invested in line with their defined investment strategy. Customers also have the option of exchanging or supplementing the bank's recommended strategy funds with third-party funds from the fund consulting basic investment universe at any time. PostFinance has implemented appropriate organizational measures to prevent the adverse effects of such a conflict of interest on customers. By outsourcing relevant activities in the value chain to an external company, the income from the bank's own investment products is reduced significantly, which reduces the conflict of interest. As a consequence, the distribution of third-party financial instruments may even be more advantageous for PostFinance. Furthermore, sales staff do not receive remuneration for the marketing and sales of the bank's own strategy funds.
